Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick tells us that America hasn't a ghost of a chance except through international co-operation. Perhaps he doesn't mean that we should join the League of Nations where, by a majority vote, we could be told when to begin fighting and just how many men and how much money we should furnish to promote the ambitions of some European nation. But possibly the reverend gentleman has in mind that we should become a member of the League Court, where 15 judges, fourteen of whom are foreigners, could give advisory opinions on the use and protection of the Panama canal, immigration, foreign debts and similar questions, which decisions we would be morally bound to accept unless we wanted to disgrace ourselves before the world by running away.

Perhaps the very worst way to help general conditions is by spending carelessly public funds and thus increasing the tax burden.

The economic stability of the United States and the recovery of its buying power are now recognized in Europe, we are told, as the first essentials to the restoration of world prosperity. Only our internationalists and their agents refuse to recognize the fact that America in diplomatic as well as in economic matters can best serve the world by giving first attention to its own welfare.

The state forester of Maryland gives the information that municipal forests are becoming popular in the United States. The first one was established in 1914 at Fitchburg, Mass. Today there are 84 in the Bay State; 24 in Vermont and in New York 200,000 acres are under municipal control. Some of these forests are selected as a watershed protection; others as a shelter from winter winds, and as recreation areas and for other purposes. This idea originated in Europe and has proven there a valuable local asset. One village in Germany through the revenues from its town forest pays all its local taxes; gives each family in the community a cord of firewood annually and $15 in cash. Fortunately this municipal enterprise is getting a good start in America.

That's practically all.

W. C. T. U. HOLDS
DRY ANNIVERSARY CELEBRATION

At the Methodist church Sunday evening the W. C. T. U. celebrated the 11th anniversary of the 18th amendment with the reading of essays on law enforcement by pupils of the local grammar school.

Winners of the essay contest were Muriel Knowles and Ruth Farman of the high eighth; Frances Chesney, low eighth; Betty Best and Basilia Morante, high seventh; Jane Whiteman and Marion Clay, low seventh; Janet Collins and Wilbur Morton, sixth; and Emily Bohnett and Doris Roberts of the high fifth. Cash prizes were awarded the winners. Judges in the contest were Mrs. Ellen R. Smith, Mrs. Albert S. Buell, Mrs. Walter I. Merrill and Mrs. E. Hubbell.

The high school orchestra played several selections and the combined choirs of the Methodist and Congregational churches sang several appropriate hymns.

Rev. Buell and Rev. Bennett were the speakers of the evening.

KIWANIS NOTES

Rev. Mark Rifenbark of San Jose gave the local Kiwanis a very interesting slide lecture on the Passion Play which he saw last summer. He gave the historical background and the story of the beginning of the play. To make the religious aspect stronger, Rev. Bennett acted as chairman and Rev. Buell was operator.

Fred Saxton of the San Jose "Y" will speak next Tuesday on "Sportsmanship in a Service Club," and for his physical and moral backer, Lloyd Berry has been selected as wielder of the mace.

C. OF C. JAIL COMMITTEE FINDS THE
CTY. JAIL BY SMELL

Appointed by Chamber of Commerce President T. A. Cutting as a special committee to investigate conditions at the Santa Clara county jail, P. H. Dunlap, S. N. Hedegard and the Rev. A. S. Buell, local Chamber of Commerce, Friday night were conducted on a tour of the jail by Sheriff William J. Emig.

Accompanied by committees from other communities, the local men saw "the works" and went away asking each other why such a vile hole is allowed to exist in the beautiful Santa Clara valley.

Every member of the sizeable inspecting party voiced disgust at condition of the jail, and were unanimous in voicing demands for a new building.

Sheriff Emig was commended for his action in bringing the matter before the public. He told the delegation that the situation might not call for an entirely new building, but that an addition is in order and the old building calls for remodeling in order to make it sanitary.

"It is inhumane to keep men locked up in such a place as our present jail," declared Mr. Emig. "There is only one worse jail in the entire state of California."

SENIORS PLAY TO A FULL HOUSE
FRIDAY EVENING

To nearly a full house the high school seniors presented their annual class play, which this year was "Adam and Eva," at the grammar school auditorium Friday evening.

A comedy, the play provided many laughs for the audience. The players knew their lines and the affair went off without a hitch, to the credit of Miss Jean McKinley, coach, and the players themselves.

Also connected with the success of the entertainment was Arthur Cyril, makeup artist; Dominic Dana, business manager; Margaret Keesling, advertising; Sylvia Rhoten, costumes; Lloyd Shank, stage manager; Tony Lovoi, electrician; Joe Costello, property manager; and Harold Courtney, Ralph Fulton, Arthur Devitt and John Stojanovich, the stage crew.

A. A. Thielke directed the music and Antonette Malvini performed a solo dance between acts.

RENOVATING IS
BUSY BEE LUNCH

Harry White, proprietor of the Busy Bee restaurant, is to be commended for his enterprise. A few days ago carpenters and painters put the finishing touches on an extensive remodeling job which has transformed this popular eating place into a real comfy restaurant. A staircase has been ripped out, pipes and wires concealed, windows added, and there are now several curtained booths where none existed before.

Harry says he believes business conditions justify these improvements, and if you could see the "Sunday dinner" crowd, for example, you'd believe that, all right.

P. T. A. HEARS
PROF. E. A. ROGERS
OF MONTEZUMA

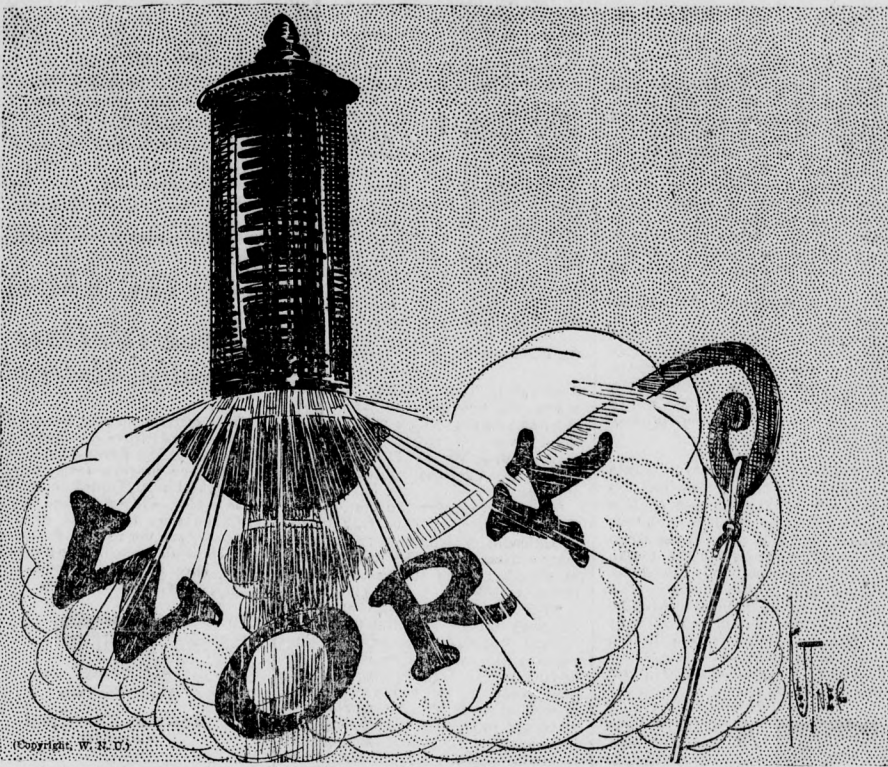

An enthusiastic meeting took place this evening when members and guests of the high school P. T. A. met in the main building of the school to hear Prof. E. A. Rogers of the Montezuma school talk.

The meeting began at 6:30 with a dinner. Every family present brought a hot or cold dish and other good things to eat. Following the dinner came the talk by Prof. Rogers. He has just recently returned from Washington, D.

The members of the Methodist choir enjoyed a basket luncheon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. D. H. Cramer last Wednesday evening at 6:30. Choir practice followed the supper.

A. W. Hoag, who has been visiting with his daughter, Mrs. P. B. Payne for some time, has returned to his home in Chico.

DRIVERS ESCAPE
INJURY IN CRASH
FRIDAY EVENING

About 8 o'clock Friday evening a car driven by Charles Arosio, Sunnyoaks avenue, collided with a car driven by M. Teixeira of this village at the intersection of Winchester road and Campbell avenue.

Victoria, Adeline and Esther Carnasecca, who were riding with Mr. Arosio, were treated at the county hospital for injuries received in the crash.

The drivers of the cars were unhurt, although the cars were quite badly damaged. Teixeira, who works for the Taste Good bakery, was on the job the following morning.

C., where he attended a conference of all educational leaders from all over the country, and he brought to his audience here an interesting discussion of the educational problems of today.

A skit entitled "The Census Taker" was very cleverly enacted by Margaret Keesling, Sylvia and Violet Rhoten. Miss Gladys Nelson gave a reading. Assembly singing was enjoyed during the evening.

OVER STATION KPO

Stephen Merrill was the guest of honor at a luncheon given by the Electrical Development league recently in the Palace hotel, San Francisco. At this luncheon he was presented with a medal and the cash award he won when he took second place in the national radio audition at New York.

According to the write-up of the best music critics which appeared in the eastern papers, Steve was entitled to first place.

The Campbell people will be unable to enjoy personal appearances of young Merrill for some time, as of young Merrill for some time, Atwater-Kent and can sing only with their permission. He will start broadcasting over KPO this Sunday evening. It will be his first broadcast since the audition, but from now on he will probably broadcast regularly.

announced that sometime this spring the P. T. A. will have an open meeting to give the people of Campbell an opportunity to hear Kathleen Norris and Ruth Comfort Mitchell, who have already promised to address the P. T. HEDEGARD IS
GRANGE MEET

The first regular meeting for 1931 of the Orchard City Grange was held last Tuesday evening at Odd Fellows hall with W. H. Woodbury taking his place as worthy master for the first time. He presided over the meeting with such dignity, accuracy and ability that the members know the affairs of the lodge are in excellent hands for another year.

The new members, those who had joined in the year 1930, were "guests" of the lodge, and each was presented by Jessie McChesney with a scarlet rose bush, to be planted in their yards near the street or highway on which they live.

The retiring worthy master, S. N. Hedegard, who has served the lodge faithfully for the past several years, was presented by the past state master, E. T. Pettit, with a past master's pin. Mr. Pettit also commented on the fine work of Mr. Hedegard as master. Hedegard now takes his place with 12 other past masters of the lodge.

During the lecture hour several splendid musical numbers were enjoyed. Miss Helen Heber sang two selections, accompanied on the piano by Miss Donna Menzies; two piano selections by Hugh Cramer were followed by a group of songs by Mrs. Worth in Grattan, accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Donald Page.

Refreshments were served in the banquet room.

LOCAL "BAD BOY" IS IN BAD AGAIN; TAKES EMIG'S CAR

The local "Peck's Bad Boy," Ed Hyatt, serving a sentence for driving while intoxicated, is in hot water again. It seems that Hyatt, who was a trusty at the county jail, was detailed to wash one of the sheriff's office cars. Subsequently this same automobile soaked a car driven by K. Yamamoto at River and San Augustine streets, the driver escaping after the crash. And the driver is believed to be Hyatt, who is missing from the vicinity of the jail-house.

The Spirit of Navy Bill Ingram, profaning every custom, rode into California last Saturday in the unorthodox vehicle of the (Associated) press, breathed an eloquent but curiously familiar wisdom on the principles and peculiarities of football, actually diverted to one very obviously original instance (ninth paragraph) which compared football to the fine, manly game of war, and departed in a manner spirits have long since found convenient, leaving behind a host of sympathetic but fatalistic friends.

Whereas one hesitates to imply that any Spirit is utterly ignorant, especially in these days of general, though imperceptible, enlightenment, one cannot but feel a large measure of genuine sympathy for the soul who puts his business on a plane with war at a time when pacifism has become practically a disease. Perhaps Mr. Ingram, whose Spirit journeyed from Jeffersonville, Ind., to whisper these trite and entangling phrases, was hoisting into public view a bit of cleverness which he had reserved for just such an auspicious occasion, maybe the long association with warring factions distorted his fancy, not to mention his logic, but at any rate, the Spirit was rather a poor harbinger of the man to come.

The lines which so particularly exasperate and presume follow: "It (football) is the nearest thing in civil life to war. It's based along the lines of war. War can be conducted on the right plane and football must be, and if it is, it brings out all the finer qualities in youth and fits him for life's battle." Well, Mr. Ingram, we shall send our American youth into some respectable war, bring out their finer qualities, save educational expenses, and develop better men. Long live Navy Bill, strategist!

The recent Baer-Heene fight, which was supposed to definitely prove that Max was on his way to the championship, or otherwise, proved nothing beyond question as Heene was fleeced out of a chance to show by a rattled timekeeper. Donovan, the timekeeper, counted the ancient mariner out in the third round on the stroke of "eight" when he became confused and added the two counts tolled off while Heene clambered back into the ring (after being shoved out) to the total. The unsatisfactory ending and Heene's obvious superiority up to the time of the strange happening cost Baer a good deal of popularity.

Scoring a field goal in the closing minutes of the game, the California basketball team managed to eke out a 26-24 victory last Saturday night over the U. C. L. A. five and assumed lead in the southern division of the Pacific Coast conference, being the only undefeated team in this section of the league. Read, Bear center, made the winning points on a set-up.

Casey Kazanjian, formerly a tackle on the Stanford football team, made his professional debut as a wrestler not long back, and became a popular ring favorite instantly. Kazanjian is big, strong and fast, and with proper handling should move up into the big money. He meets Buck Olsen Jan. 27 at Dreamland.

That U. S. C. track team, which turned in one of the four major victories S. C. scored on Stanford last year, is going to have several difficulties this season, and the author, having seen Dyer, Hables and Lombardi crack ten seconds in the century at this early date, and witnessed Ben Eastman, a sophomore, in a 43-5 quarter, along with numerous other astounding performances, is ready to string with them right now. Drop up nearly any Friday afternoon and see for yourself.

Dispute Between President and Senate Over Power Board Nominations Wrecks Co-Operation—Red Cross Asks Drought Relief Fund.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

Sen. Wheeler

CO-OPERATION between President Hoover and the senate, never notable for its warmth, was practically obliterated by the dispute over the appointments to the power board. When the senate asked the Chief Executive to return to it his nominations of George Otis Smith, Marcel Garsaud and Claude L. Draper so that it might rescind its confirmation of those names, Mr. Hoover with understandable indignation curtly refused, declaring that he "cannot admit the power of the senate to encroach upon the executive functions by removal of a duly appointed executive officer under the guise of reconsideration of his nomination."

The President was fortified in his action by an opinion of Attorney General Mitchell, and he gave out a public statement explaining his course and intimating that the action of the senate was actuated by "a hope of symbolizing me as the defender of the power interests if I refuse to sacrifice three outstanding public servants." He said there was no issue for or against the power companies involved.

Senators who are in opposition to the administration thereupon arose in their wrath and scathingly denounced Mr. Hoover, and the body, by a vote of 26 to 23, ordered the clerk to restore the names of the three power commissioners to the executive calendar, which placed the senate on record as holding that no power commission exists. Senator Burton K. Wheeler of Montana served notice that he would seek to tie up the salaries of the commissioners in the annual independent officers appropriation bill, intimating that if necessary a filibuster would be conducted against the measure.

While the action of the senate was in order under its rules, it was unprecedented and does not seem to have met with general public approval. Since the commissioners had been duly sworn in and the attorney general has ruled that the appointments were constitutionally made, President Hoover was on solid legal ground in rejecting the senate's demand and indeed that was the least he could do under the circumstances. In this case the rules of the senate are in conflict with the law and the Constitution. Whether or not Mr. Hoover was wise in impugning the motives of the senate is open to question.

SINCE the destruction of private grain operators is held by the federal farm board to be no part of its function, Chairman Legge has virtually warned them to be ready for the July 1 settlements. He discloses that the board not only holds huge contracts for future delivery but also is fast gaining control of the cash wheat supply. Legge said the grain stabilization corporation is holding about 75,000,000 bushels of cash wheat, and about 55,000,000 bushels of futures contract wheat which must be delivered between now and next July 1.

He admitted that on July 1, when the new crop begins coming in, he expects the board to be holding "virtually all of the national carry-over." Such a position with any futures contracts outstanding would place the board in a position to wipe out short-speculators who happened to be due to deliver wheat to the board. A similar condition existed several months ago, and at that time the board spared the short sellers by extending the delivery date.

WITH the warm approval of President Hoover, an appeal for funds for the relief of sufferers in the drought-stricken districts of the United States has been issued by John Barton Payne, head of the Red Cross. It is the hope of Mr. Payne that $10,000,000 will be contributed by the generous citizens of the country. He says the demands for help in the drought areas are increasing. Not only food, clothing and fuel for humans are needed, but also live stock feed.

In his letter to Mr. Payne the President reviewed briefly the drought relief work of the Red Cross since last fall, when $5,000,000 was set aside for the purpose and appeals for further funds were postponed until it should be possible to measure the volume of requirements. He continued:

"The problem has now developed more than the available funds and is not wholly one of food, clothing, and other personal care among farmers, who have suffered from the drought. There is also difficulty in the smaller rural and industrial towns as a double reaction from the drought and depression. I understand that these towns are unable to organize effectively to meet their problems as are the municipalities."

"The arrangement made by Secretary Hyde and yourself by which a representative of local Red Cross chapters will sit upon the local committees created by the Department of Agriculture for administration of the crop relief will assure that every one truly deserving will be looked after with care and without waste."

"I am confident that you will command the never failing generous instincts of our people toward those who are less fortunate."

Investigation of conditions in Arkansas shows that Senator Caraway was not exaggerating much when he told of the needs of the farmers of his state in his argument for the senate amendment to the $45,000,000 drought relief appropriation. The senate wanted to add $15,000,000 for loans for food, but the house rejected the amendment.

Senator Robinson of Arkansas tried a new plan, offering an amendment to the interior department appropriation bill providing for a federal donation of $25,000,000 to the Red Cross for relief in city and rural districts.

IF THE Democratic party wants another wet candidate for the Presidency in 1932, Albert C. Ritchie is ready for the job. Such was the implication in his address when he was inaugurated for the fourth time as governor of Maryland. Dealing with national rather than state issues, he attacked prohibition, criticized the part played by the Hoover administration in the economic situation and declared his opposition to governmental interference with business.

Al Smith

APOLOGY and a repudiation from the Republican national committee are demanded by Alfred E. Smith, Democratic Presidential candidate in 1928, for permitting its executive director, Robert H. Lucas, to circulate 800,000 copies of the "Al Smith-Raskob Idea of Happiness" circular in Nebraska and other states during the campaign last fall. On the circular was a picture of a barroom.

Mr. Smith made his demand in a letter which Senator Wagner of New York introduced before the Nye senatorial campaign committee. He declared a quotation attributed to him was false, and said: "I am entitled to have 800,000 copies of a statement, showing that I was falsely quoted, distributed just as widely as the original cartoon was and to the same organizations."

Senator Nye told the committee that charges of perjury would be filed at Lincoln, Neb., against George W. Norris, the grocer of Broken Bow, who sought to run against Senator George W. Norris in the last primary in Nebraska.

Nye's recent statement that he would offer a resolution in the senate declaring vacant the seat of Senator Davis of Pennsylvania because of excessive expenditures gave great pain to the latter gentleman, who asserted his "life, both private and public, is an open book containing no blots of dishonor or chicanery." Mr. Davis claims most of the large Brown-Davis ticket fund was spent for Brown.

SEVERAL hundred delegates, mainly from Mississippi valley states, attended a waterway and flood control conference in Chicago promoted by Mayor William Hale Thompson. The men from Louisiana were especially active in the meeting and presented a platform calling for more money for flood control, more rapid expenditure of the funds now available, and radical changes in the Jadwin plan for a reservoir system, with a board of distinguished civil engineers replacing the War department engineers in charge of construction, if necessary.

Mayor Thompson was lauded as "the most effective friend the Mississippi valley ever has had," and several delegates bitterly denounced Col. Robert Isham Randolph, president of the Chicago Association of Commerce, who in a New Orleans speech had called the conference a ballyhoo and political rally for Thompson.

DR. John Grier Hibben has announced that he will retire from the presidency of Princeton university at the end of the academic year in 1932. There is much discussion as to who will succeed him, but the board of trustees has not yet taken up the question. Most prominently mentioned for the place is Raymond A. Fosdick, an eminent New York lawyer who graduated from Princeton with the class of 1905. He is now one of the trustees. Senator David A. Reed of Pennsylvania, a member of the class of 1900, is also suggested. He, too, is on the board of trustees.

Doctor Hibben was elected president of the university January 11, 1912, and inaugurated the following May 12. He succeeded Woodrow Wilson, who resigned in 1910 upon his election as governor of New Jersey.

SERIOUS opposition by the senate to President Hoover's six nominees for membership on the tariff board developed in the case of only one, and during the week all of them were confirmed. They are Henry P. Fletcher, Thomas W. Page, John Lee Coulter, Alfred P. Dennis, Edgar B. Brossard and Lincoln Dixon.

Robinson of Arkansas and Walsh of Montana attacked Brossard, who is from Utah, because of his alleged part in advocating a high tariff on sugar in 1924 when he was an economist in the employ of the old tariff commission. But the radical Republicans failed to support the Democrats and some of them made speeches in favor of Brossard; and the Utah man was confirmed by a vote of 45 to 38.

S. H. Strawn

UNDER the auspices of the International Chamber of Commerce a great world business conference will open in Washington May 4 and continue six days. Business men from 46 countries will attend and will try to determine the causes of the present international trade depression. This subject will be taken up promptly at the first plenary session, which will be presided over by Georges Thémis, former premier of Belgium and president of the international chamber.

The program for the conference was announced by Silas H. Strawn of Chicago, chairman of the American committee of the international chamber. In discussing the existing conditions he said:

"The conviction is held in many quarters abroad that the first step toward business recovery in Europe is the resumption of normal buying in the United States. Until our people, by the renewal of purchases abroad of both raw materials and finished products, can reduce surplus stocks and bring about a stable price level in the more important countries, European business leaders see no probability of substantial improvement in the world economic situation."

"Perhaps the most ominous cloud that overshadows the whole economic world is the dumping on the world markets of large quantities of grain, raw materials, and semi-finished products by Soviet Russia, at prices less than the normal costs of production."

"The Washington conference will endeavor to investigate carefully the distinction between cause and effect in the present situation, with a view to establishing to what extent remedies can be sought and the first steps hastened by co-ordinating sectional endeavor."

ARISTIDE BRIAND's plan for a union of European states is now under official consideration, for the committee appointed by the League of Nations to study the proposal and draw up a scheme for putting it into effect met Friday in Geneva for its first session. Not only Europe, but the whole world is deeply interested and will follow the doings of the committee closely.

The committee includes thirteen foreign ministers and is presided over by M. Briand himself. Sir Eric Drummond, secretary general of the league, is in South America, so the chairman is assisted by J. L. M. C. Avenol, the assistant secretary, who is a Frenchman.

There are numerous opponents of the Briand scheme, and they say nothing can come of it. Great Britain especially cannot look on it with favor because she is both a European and a world power and such a union as is proposed would probably work to the injury of her vast dominions. The "revisionist" states, such as Germany, Hungary and Italy, would scarcely support the plan before their boundary lines were changed to suit them. The permanent officials of the League of Nations feel that the suggested union would weaken the league and its worldwide ideals. Even in France there are many against the plan, for Briand's political adversaries are increasing in numbers. He himself apparently doesn't hope for more at this time than to keep the project alive.

ONE of America's truly great Jews, Nathan Straus of New York, has passed on to his reward. Having acquired a large fortune in merchandising, he devoted himself to aiding his fellow men and gave away many millions. Outstanding among his benefactions was his work for the conservation of infant life largely through the establishment of stations where pure milk could be obtained for babies by the poor. Chicago also lost a philanthropic Jew in the death of Edwin F. Meyer, who gave large sums to dependents of slain policeman and was an organizer of the Associated Jewish charities.

NO TRACE has been found, at this writing, of Mrs. Beryl Hart and Lieut. W. S. MacLaren and the plane Tradewind in which they flew from Bermuda for the Azores on their way to Paris. For several days there were severe storms on the Atlantic and it was taken for granted that the two aviators were lost.

HISTORY'S MYSTERIES

Unsolved Tiddles That Still Puzzle Authorities Here and Abroad

The Last Days of Edgar Allen Poe

VERY little is known of the final portion of the life of Edgar Allen Poe, one of the most brilliant men whom this country has ever produced, for the death of Mrs. Poe in 1847 brought the poet almost to the verge of insanity and, during the remaining two years of his life, he was hardly responsible for his actions.

After his bereavement he plunged himself deeper into dissipation and, wandering about, finally reached the South, where he renewed the acquaintance of a widow in Richmond with whom he had been in love during his youth. Sometime during the latter part of September, 1849, Poe set out for the North to make arrangements for his wedding, and little is known of his movements after this. One story has it that on October 3, the date of a municipal election, the poet was found unconscious in a saloon which had been used as a polling place in Baltimore and that he was removed to a hospital, where he died of delirium tremens. Another report states that he had dined with some military friends, had become intoxicated and, in this state, was found by politicians who drugged him and made him vote at several places.

This version is true only in part. So far as is known, Poe had passed Baltimore on his way North. He had, it appears, reached Havre de Grace, where the conductor of the train, finding him in a state of delirium, and knowing that he had friends in Baltimore, took him back to that city. This was the eve of the election day, and the next day, it is said, Poe was drugged and made to vote in eleven different wards. When Poe was found on the following day in the rear of one of the political headquarters, he was removed to the Washington university hospital, but the exposure, combined with the effect of liquor and drugs, brought on an inflammation of the brain and he died shortly after midnight on October 7, 1849.

While it is generally admitted that Poe died from the effects of dissipation, there are those who contend that his death is by no means to be assigned to any such positive and debasing cause. For many years of his life, in spite of all accounts to the contrary, Poe lived happily and comfortably in a charming home, with a companion who realized his delicate and refined ideals. The death of his companion was the one great, unexpected sorrow that Poe would not and could not accept philosophically, and, from the moment of his wife's death, he waged an unequal battle with a relentless fate. Knowing well that he needed the balance and support afforded by the interchange of spiritual sympathy with a congenial mind, he was deprived even of the possible gratification of this want by the peculiar construction of his mental organism. He may be regarded as a man who lived and died without ever being completely understood, save by his wife; one who, sensitive to a degree altogether incomprehensible to practical minds, was so unfortunate as to live only among the practical-minded, as such, was omitted in society's estimation of a man or an artist. It was Poe's misfortune that his personality was totally at variance with the time in which he lived, for, had he been born a century later, he would have found a world which had come to realize the fact that natural genius is strangely akin to unbalanced mentality and that much is to be forgiven the artist which would never be excused in the ordinary run of human beings.

No man of letters in America has had so much mystery thrown about him, not only regarding his life but with respect to the majority of his writings, for different biographers have interpreted his imaginative tales and poems in varying ways and have found in them so many different morals that Poe might almost be styled "the misunderstood." The fact that his death should be shrouded in so much mystery does not seem remarkable when the reader of his biography will find that his whole life was at total variance with that of the average mortal, but the fact remains that even the researches have failed to uncover all or even the major portion of the events which took place during the last two years of the strangely eventful life of this unusual character.

Modern Minstrel Shows

Minstrel is a name introduced into England by the Normans, and which comprehended singers and performers of instrumental music, together with jugglers, dancers and other persons. The negro minstrels are a species of musical entertainment of a quaint and simple kind, which originated among the negroes of the South, United States, and was first made popular at public entertainments by E. P. Christy, the originator of the troupes of imitation negro musicians.

Pig Came Back

The story of the dog that crossed America on foot in returning home has a counterpart in a tale from Gatesville, N. C., about T. E. Cross' pig. Cross sold a big black pig to a steamboat captain. The pig was carried to Murfreesboro. A week later it returned, muddy and dirty, from the town forty miles away. Cross gave the captain his money back for the homing pig.

COUNTRY WOMEN HAVE MUSICAL PROGRAM

The Country Woman's club met in regular session Monday afternoon with the president, Mrs. M. E. Purmort, presiding.

The club voted to send five dollars to the County Federation scholarship fund. Three students already are being aided with the money so far raised in this benefit fund.

Announcement was made of the County Federation meeting to be held Friday in Los Gatos. The subject is quite apropos, being a discussion of our county institutions by several speakers. Reservations for luncheon to be served at the Presbyterian church should be made at once.

Mrs. E. I. Price announced the program numbers which had been arranged by the committee, Mrs. T. A. Cutting, Mrs. W. I. Merrill, Mrs. E. I. Price and Miss Jessie Lewis.

A. A. Thielke, leader of the school orchestra, violin; Dorothy Watson, cello, and Gladys Nelson, piano, played three delightful numbers: "Dancing Moonbeams," Ward; "Barcarolle" from the "Tales of Hoffman;" and "Eternal Spring" by Engelman.

Cora Blakesley and Dorothy Todd of the dramatic class of the C. U. H. S. exemplified their regular classwork with readings, "The Barefoot Boy" by Whittier, and "A Friend's Greeting," by Edgar Guest.

Marion Fisci and Ruth Lydell of the same class presented a very clever dialogue, "Manikin and Minikin," a play without action.

This interesting program was concluded by Miss Katherine Wood who played three beautiful piano solos, "Autumn" by Chaminade, "Dainty March," "Poland," and "Horn Pipe Arrangement," Percy Grainger.

The early arrival of spring was forecast by the bowls of delicate winter iris with which the room was attractively decorated.

Announcement that mail order catalogs next spring will show price reductions of from 20 to 40 per cent ought to get a good laugh out of the free traders who tried to kid us into the belief that the new tariff law would increase the cost of living.

might have been the portion of modern youngsters struggling with school history, if the telephone or telegraph had been invented before 1812, says Miss M. Curran, local manager of the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph company.

The day before the United States declared war in 1812, the British parliament repealed certain orders in council, one of America's principal causes of hostility. But this news, without telegraph or telephone, took weeks to cross the Atlantic, and the war was beyond recall.

This incident in American history is but one of many interesting items in the 1931 Telephone Almanac, according to Miss Curran, who says the book is valuable to after-dinner speakers, teachers on the look-out for a new anecdote to live the same old lesson, and to parents trying to rouse Junior's interest in something besides football and baseball. The manager says the book may be obtained without charge at the telephone business office.

Hearthstones turned into monuments

To few men is given the tribute of public monuments in stone or bronze. But every man, if he will, can make a monument of his own hearthstone, if it symbolizes the comfort and happiness of his family and commands the respect of his fellow men.

National Thrift Week serves to remind us of the elements from which such monuments are built. Glance at the Thrift Week Creed. In your own case... do you save regularly, have you made a will, have you protected your insurance with a life insurance trust, have you a sound plan of home financing...?

In the promotion of thrift, the safekeeping of funds, the encouragement of home ownership and the perpetuation of estates through well-drawn trust provisions, this bank is a guardian of hearthstone monuments throughout all the San Francisco Bay area.
